FROM THESE ASHES

From these ashes on my forehead
In this short season that is Lent
Form these wishes for what's ahead
As we've sought for reason with intent

Our hearts, like Pharaoh's, sometimes become hard
To God who beckons us to return to the desert
And encounter the Healer who was scarred
Let's forsake our obsessions and make the effort

For after the howling dry east wind
We must think about how grace still abounds
For once the stream has ceased around the bend
Our pride will die under a baptism that drowns

Just as bodies hunger
In the valley of dry bones
Justice embodies thunder
In our rallies as our 'cry' groans

May we take pleasure and expectation from what He said

That those who hunger and thirst for justice
Will receive a measure of resurrection from the dead

And out of deep places of our pain He'll fulfil
His promise.
